One of the largest and most respected maternal fetal medicine teams in the state, New Jersey Perinatal Associates (NJPA) is home to Drs. Richard Miller, Leon Smith, and Edward Wolf. These compassionate and fellowship-trained perinatologists are well versed in all areas of maternal fetal medicine, including prenatal diagnosis, genetic counseling, the management of pregnancy complications, and medical complications of pregnancy.

The practice, which will soon add new locations in Paramus and Parsippany, features a multidisciplinary team of physicians, genetic counselors, perinatal nurses, and ultrasound technicians who work with pregnant women and their obstetricians to deliver the healthiest babies possible. Use of the latest technological advances, such as 3-D and 4-D ultrasound, is also part of the team's caring and sensitive approach to each individual.

Common issues that bring patients to the practice are conditions such as diabetes, hypertension, or heart diseases. Women who are expecting twins or triplets also look to NJPA for expert care throughout their pregnancies.

These New Jersey Monthly Top Doctors are each board certified in obstetrics and gynecology and in maternal fetal medicine. They practice with Drs. Margaret Dziadosz, Tania Kasdaglis, Kathy Matthews, Jonathan O'Brien, Linda Peláez, Wendy Warren, and Dom Terrone.

HOSPITAL AFFILIATIONS: Saint Barnabas Medical Center, Livingston; Clara Maass Medical Center, Belleville; Holy Name Medical Center, Teaneck; Overlook Medical Center, Summit. MEDICAL TRAINING: Dr. Miller: University of North Carolina (fellowship). Dr. Smith: Baylor College of Medicine (fellowship). Dr. Wolf: University of Connecticut (fellowship).
